

MICROBIOLOGY INTERNSHIP OFFER

We have a great Microbiology Internship opportunity for your students in a company developing novel technology for a sustainable environment & health!

Based in the beautiful coastal city of Brixham, England, the host company is a University research and development spin-out with laboratories in a stunning seafront location. It specializes in microbiology and immunology research expertise, applied to screening the environment for pathogenic contaminants. This includes applications in the food and beverage industry, healthcare, and recreational water markets. Currently in a phase of expansion, this company will offer a truly rewarding experience.

The student will be undertaking the following tasks with their mentor:

- Antibody selectivity and specificity against a range of target antigens
- Antibody coupling to magnetic beads and immunoseparation of microbial targets
- Preparation of food samples for assay evaluation
- Detection of bacterial antigen using Limulus assay and molecular techniques

This internship is the perfect opportunity for microbiology, immunology or related life sciences students. The successful candidate will acquire a broad range of skills and expertise in various techniques, instrumentation and sample preparation and is guaranteed a fulfilling and challenging learning and working experience.

Please forward this exciting opportunity to your students and recent graduates. Don't miss the deadline, apply before the 28th of June!

At ESPA we aim to make the transition to come to a foreign country as easy and stress free as possible, especially in the current circumstances, so we always find the housing for the students and it will be paid for by the host company.

There are no fees for students or universities to use our services.

Would you be available for a quick chat? I'd like to learn more about your University, if there are any concerns about sending your students to the UK, and to discuss if there is a possibility for a cooperation in the future. Please book a time in my diary.
